Neat Plaids, Playful Knits

Fall weather can be drab; don't let your wardrobe follow suit. Emanate that youthful look without seeming too puerile by juxtaposing a subdued plaid like this collegiate windowpane jacket with a contrasting knit tie for a much-appreciated pop of color.

Down-to-earth Tones

For a more casual presentation, cuff the jeans but forget the socks. Don earth-tone suede oxfords to complement a simple beige jacket and solid tie. A well-kept beard, while optional, is right on the button for this look.

Keep Warm, Stay Cool

Ward off the autumnal chills with intelligent layers that lift up classic pieces into the modern day. Pair a wool houndstooth blazer with a camel V-neck sweater and T-shirt for a look that both fathers and sons can agree on.

The Cumberbund Stays Home

Posh occasions may have you dusting off your Sunday best, but that's no excuse for looking over-adorned. A midnight blue vintage dinner jacket coupled with an elegant bowtie is just the right amount of sophistication. Leave the extra garnish for the cocktails.

Cashmere Casual

Make your mark without too much noise. Tie up a tweed jacket ensemble (use pocket insignia wisely — only if you have something to say) with a cashmere scarf for good measure. You might be mistaken for a fashion-conscious European tourist, in a good way.

Tweeds, Turtlenecks and Well-worn Truths

The denim-and-tweed combo may seem safe for this season, but you can stick your neck out with a wool turtleneck and a pair of your more well-worn jeans. Add a playful pocket square and you're ready to take the office by storm, rain or shine.

Fall Footwear: To Sock or Not to Sock?

The streets may be sloppy, but your footwear choices don't have to be. Make sure the first thing stepping into your office is a stylish shoe. Go sockless with a pair of deep-brown leather monkstraps, or don gray chukkas and some attractive socks to boot.

Blue is the New Black

Embrace blue head-to-toe to stand out in a sea of black suits. This slim-cut, blue-on-blue look smartly balances the need for color and sophistication at the office. Navy is the it-shade for a suit that can help to stave off the sartorial blues.

Out of Darkness, Let There Be White

For Mr. Ubercasual, there's always a nice pair of black jeans, a grey button-down hanging out under a dark V-neck, bottomed off with a pair of white bucks. Just consult the weather app before walking out the door or you may be slogging in soggy, brown clogs all day long.

Own Your Look

Head to toe, today's man has limitless permutations. Hair — big or buzzed? Jacket — patterned or solid? Tie or no tie? Dress shoes or casual? Matching suit or blazer? A gentleman will take his cues and note his favorites, but each morning he will stand before the closet and make his own decisions.
